I thought the visit to [REDACTED] was useful in that it reminded us of the availability of this very impressive installation for training of various types. The one-hour tour [REDACTED] was particularly interesting in this respect and should certainly be continued as part of the briefing. I would have appreciated more time for the discussion of the OC, Phase I course and less time on the discussion of Staff and Agent training. These latter two presentations could have been given just as easily at Headquarters. The Staff Training briefing was really nothing more than a recitation of courses available. The group seemed keenly interested in the OC course: the time allotted to various subjects, the pertinence of some courses, etc., and I have the impression that some very useful ideas might have come out of that session if there had been more time. Perhaps the evening smoker should have been organized into a more businesslike single group discussion for this purpose. Finally, I would recommend that the group attend a more lively CT class, one that involves give and take between instructor and students. It would be interesting to see these students in action in the classroom.
